Opting out of the Civil Service Pensions arrangements

Members of all the Civil Service Pensions arrangements can use this form to opt out of their pension. After reading the factsheet, please fully complete Pages 3 and 4, and then return the form to your employer, to complete Pages 5 and 6.

Your opt out takes effect shortly after your employer receives your form. For information on how long it can take to hear about your pension, please see the ‘what to expect guide’ to leaving before normal pension age: www.civilservicepensionscheme.org.uk/members/what-to-expect

Think about what you’re giving up

If you are thinking of opting out of the Civil Service Pensions arrangements, remember that if you do, you will miss out on a range of valuable benefits for you and your family.

Not only is your pension an important part of your pay and reward package (your employer also pays a pension contribution on your behalf), it is also good to know that you have made a start on planning for your retirement.

On the next page are some of the common reasons why members consider opting out of their pensions, and we have included some information you should read if they apply to you.

What you need to know

The Civil Service Pensions arrangements are covered by automatic enrolment. This means if you opt out your employer will have to automatically put you back into a pension scheme on their automatic re-enrolment date. This occurs once every three years.

If you change employers (or your contract changes) it’s likely that you will be automatically enrolled into the pension scheme. If you are re-enrolled, and do not want to stay in the scheme, you will need to complete another opt out form. For more information about automatic enrolment, please speak to your employer.

You may be able to opt back in at a later date. Your employer will help you with this.

Your employer cannot ask you or force you to opt out. If they do, you can tell The Pensions Regulator: www.thepensionsregulator.gov.uk

From April 2016 the State Pension is changing, and contracting out will end. This means you will pay the same level of National Insurance (NI) contributions whether or not you are a member of the pension scheme.
I don’t want to pay contributions towards a pension
Although it may seem that you are paying a large percentage of your pay towards your pension, your pension contributions are not taxed and therefore your contributions actually cost you less than the rate shown on your payslip. Your tax is worked out on your pay after your pension contributions have been taken.

If you joined on or after 1 October 2002, or you are a member of alpha, you can choose a partnership pension account. You can choose your own level of contributions, and your employer makes contributions to build up a pension pot for you. You can also choose to not pay any contributions at all.

I’m too young to think about a pension
You’re never too young to start building up a pension and the earlier you start the better your pension will be. Think about the lifestyle you want in retirement, and how this will be paid for.

I’m not planning to stay in my job for very long
If you leave, or opt out with less than two years’ service you may be able to transfer the value of your pension to another scheme, or you can get a refund of your contributions (minus a deduction for tax). If you have more than two years’ service your pension is ‘preserved’ and held in the scheme until you claim it, or apply to transfer the value of your preserved pension to another pension scheme.

If you have a partnership pension account, you can take it with you when you leave.

Further information
You can read the main scheme guides for more information on the benefits you will get by being a member of the Civil Service Pensions arrangements. You can find them here: www.civilservicepensionscheme.org.uk/publications

Please think very carefully before making your decision and consider taking independent financial advice to help you make the right choice for you.

This factsheet provides information to help you when considering opting out. This factsheet does not cover every detail of the schemes, these are contained in the rules, which are the legal basis of the scheme.

You should note that nothing in this factsheet can override the rules, and in the event of any difference, the rules will apply.
